Child Development and Mood Expert Opens New Center

WEST BLOOMFIELD, MI – December 16, 2010 Dr. Ira Glovinsky, a nationally recognized leader in the field of child and family mental health and developmental disorders, is pleased to announce the opening of Glovinsky Center for the Child and Family.

The center offers a comprehensive multidisciplinary approach to evaluation and treatment in the following areas:

- Developmental challenges
- Learning disabilities
- Sensory disorders
- Emotional problems
- Mood disorders
- Speech and Language challenges
- Autism spectrum disorders

Glovinsky Center Team (from left to right):
Lindsay Buckley Ludtke, MS, OTR/L - Occupational Therapy
Nanci Hester, MS, LMSW - Social Work
Ira Glovinsky, Ph.D. - Psychology
Christine Hogan Henk, MA, CCC - Speech Therapy

The Glovinsky Center team includes four licensed professionals in the fields of psychology (Ira Glovinsky), social work (Nanci Hester), speech and language (Christine Hogan Henk), and occupational therapy (Lindsay Buckley Ludtke). The team works together to fully meet the varying needs of their patients.

Further, the staff at the Center is trained in the developmental, individual difference, relationship-based model known as DIR®/Floortime™. The objectives are to build healthy foundations for social, emotional, and intellectual capacities rather than focusing on skills and isolated behaviors. The program goes beyond symptoms to look at the child as he or she develops in all areas of functioning and abilities. Dr. Glovinsky is just one of two professionals in the State of Michigan to be certified in this method of therapy.
